

122973 - If he came from Egypt to visit his father in ad-Dammaam, and was intending to perform 'Umrah, from where should he enter ihram?

the question

In sha Allah I am going to go to ad-Dammaam for five days, to see my father who works there; this is my intention.

Question 1: is it permissible for me to change my intention there and enter ihram for 'Umrah from there?

Question 2: if the answer is yes, do I have to stay in ad-Dammaam for three days before entering ihram for 'Umrah, or can I enter ihram for 'Umrah at any time?

Question 3: what is the miqaat from which I have to enter ihram for 'Umrah and put on the ihram garments?

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

If you are travelling to visit your father, then you decide to do 'Umrah, there is no stipulation requiring you to stay in ad-Dammaam for three days; rather you can go for 'Umrah whenever you want, and enter ihram from the miqaat from which the people of ad-Dammaam enter ihram, which is Qarn al-Manaazil (as-Sayl al-Kabeer), near at-Taa'if.

The basic principle is that whoever comes wanting to do 'Umrah must enter ihram from the miqaat, and the miqaat of the people of Egypt is al-Juhfah or Raabigh. But if a person is going to go to another city, such as al-Madinah, Riyadh or ad-Dammaam, it is permissible for him to delay ihram, then enter ihram from the miqaat of the people of the city that he goes to.
