

130883 - Ruling on investing waqf funds

the question

There is a waqf for offering udhiyah (sacrifices), and the person in charge of this waqf thinks that the funds should be invested in shares so that sacrifices can be offered using the income generated. Is that permissible?

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

There is nothing wrong with investing this waqf in shares in a company that does not deal with riba, if this company is proven to be safe and free of risk, and it is permissible to offer sacrifices using the income generated. And Allah is the source of strength. End quote.
