

174755 - To whom should condolences be offered among the family of the deceased?

the question

If someone dies, to whom should we offer condolences among his family?.

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

It is mustahabb to offer condolences to everyone who is affected by the loss of the deceased, old or young, except a child who has not reached the age of understanding, or a young woman, to whom only her mahrams should offer condolences, according to what we said previously in the answer to question no. 157874.

It says in Kashshaaf al-Qinaa', 2/169: It is mustahabb to offer condolences to the bereaved family, even children and even friends of the deceased and so on, such as neighbours of the deceased. End quote.

Al-Hajjaawi said in Matn az-Zaad: It is Sunnah to offer condolences to the bereaved.

Shaykh Ibn 'Uthaymeen (may Allah have mercy on him) said: He said "condolences to the bereaved" and not "condolences to the relatives", so everyone who is affected by the loss, even if he is not related, may be offered condolences. And everyone who is not affected by the loss, even if he is a relative, may not be offered condolences. So whoever is affected should be offered condolences and whoever is not affected should not be offered condolences.

End quote from ash-Sharh al-Mumti', 5/186

In Mawaahib al-Jaleel, 2/230, 231, it says: Condolences may be offered to old and young, whoever will understand what is said to him. ... It says in al-Madkhal: A man should be offered condolences for the death of his friend, because he is one of those affected by the loss. End quote.

And Allah knows best.
