

5960 - a fiance to be alone with his fiancée

the question

I live in the US alone my parents back in my country recently one muslim brother proposed me marriage, but the problem is that he also doesn't have anyone in the US So, he says that we should know each other before marriage or engagement, and he insists on talking to me.

I heard that while seeing each other the third person from the family should be there, or at least the third person should be there. Is that true?

And what if I talk to him alone, would it be considering zina?

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

With regard to your question, it is not permissible at all for you to be alone with this man, because the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allaah be upon him) said:

“No man and woman are alone together, but the Shaytaan is the third one present.”

There is nothing wrong with talking to him from behind a screen, such as on the telephone, so long as this is done in a proper manner, with no suspicious talk and no fitnah (temptation), and as long as you do not overdo it (or talk too much). You should only talk as much as is necessary.

With regard to his claims about the importance of knowing one another before marriage, this is not right. It is sufficient to ask some trustworthy people and to find out about the prospective partner so as to be certain and have peace of mind. We ask Allaah to make things easy for you and for him. May Allaah bless our Prophet Muhammad..