

66079 - Does Smelling Food Break Your Fast

the question

What is the ruling on one who inhales the smell of food deliberately when he is fasting?.

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

There is nothing wrong with a fasting person smelling good smells, from food, perfume etc, but he should not inhale bukkhoor (incense) or the steam coming out of the cooking pot because these have particles which may reach his stomach.

It says in Haashiyat al-Dasooqi (1/525):

If the smoke of bukkhoor or steam from the cooking pot reaches the throat, the day must be made up... if it reaches it through inhaling deliberately, whether the one who does that is the one who is making it or someone else. But if one of them reaches the throat without him wanting it to, then he does not have to make it up, whether he is the one who is making it or someone else according to the correct view. End quote.

Shaykh Ibn Baaz (may Allah have mercy on him) was asked:

Is it permissible to use perfume, such as putting on 'ood, cologne and bukkhoor during the day in Ramadan?

He replied:

Yes, it is permissible to use it, so long as one does not inhale bukkhoor. End quote.

Fataawa Ibn Baaz, 15/267

Shaykh Ibn ‘Uthaymeen (may Allah have mercy on him) was asked: What is the ruling on a fasting person using perfumes during the day in Ramadan?

He replied:

There is nothing wrong with using them during the day in Ramadan and inhaling them, except for bukhoor, which should not be inhaled, because it has particles which may reach the stomach, i.e., the smoke. End quote.

Fataawa Ramadan, p. 499

It says in Fataawa al-Lajnah al-Daa’imah (10/271):

If a person puts on any kind of perfume during the day in Ramadan when he is fasting, that does not invalidate his fast, but he should not inhale bukhoor and powdered perfume such as powder of musk. End quote.

The point is that simply smelling food does not affect the fast, but one should not inhale the steam from the cooking pot.

And Allah knows best.
